

Fly-tipping Clean-up in Bredhurst's Ancient Woods

8th November 2006

Bredhurst woods saw a second clean-up operation at the weekend to remove flytipping rubbish from the beautiful 600 acre woods by the Bredhurst Woods Action Group.

Over 30 volunteers rallied around to remove rubbish such as old tyres that people had dumped. The project was supported by Bredhurst Parish Council and the Clean Kent Campaign.

Keith Ferrin, Cabinet Member - Environment, Highways & Waste, Kent County Council commented:

Flytipping is an anti-social behaviour and a blight on Kent's landscape, so it's great to see communities taking pride in their local environment by carrying out clean-ups in their local area like this.

The clean-up aimed to continue the good work that was carried out at the original clean-up day which took place back in April, during which over 100 tonnes of rubbish, including tyres, builders' debris and an Abbey National cashpoint machine were recovered.

This community initiative started with just six volunteers but now has over 200 members. For more information about the Bredhurst Woods Action Group visit the groups website or log onto the Clean Kent website to see how you can get involved in volunteering.
